The Children’s Hospital of Richmond at VCU Child Development Clinic (CDC) is committed to providing comprehensive developmental assessments for children and youth who are suspected of having developmental delays and/or disabilities. Our staff offers medical, psychological, social work, evaluations and testing to assist in making a diagnosis. Recommendations are generated from the evaluations for parents and other professionals to assist with care planning, referrals, follow-up care coordination, and intervention services.

The CDC provides multidisciplinary services for children and youth with:

- Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder
- Autism Spectrum Disorders
- Behavioral/emotional disorders
- Communication disorders
- Developmental delays
- Intellectual deficiency (mental retardation)
- Specific learning disabilities
- Other disorders or disabilities

Child Development Clinic Team
The multidisciplinary CDC team includes a developmental pediatrician, geneticist, child psychologist, social worker, nurse and educational consultants. The team looks forward to working with your child and family.

Referrals
Referrals can be made by families, schools, physicians, social services, and other community or professional agencies. Children served in the CDC must be residents of Virginia and under 21 years of age. Families of all income levels are eligible and welcome for services.
